What's the Point?

by Paul Kolberg

About the book:

In times of crisis, we all ask "What's the point?". There is only one point in living but it may not be what you think. It turns out the answer to the question is hidden in plain sight and is connected to the fundamental purpose and essence of our existence.

About the author:

Paul Kolberg was born in England to a mother of Irish parentage and a father of Prussian ancestry. He is the author of Jesus and Kabbalah – The Lost Kingdom (which reached #1 on Amazon in three categories) and Meditations in a Crisis. Paul makes complicated topics and concepts easy to understand. In the past, Paul has regularly written articles for various magazines but in 2014, he became a professional author, playwright and screenwriter. Paul has written one further book that is in the process of publication, as well as three plays, one of which has been recorded for radio and is in post-production.

Critics & Reviews:

Reviewed by Foluso Falaye for Readers' Favorite

Why do bad things happen? Why is there pain and suffering in the world? What is the point in trying when all these negative forces exist, lurking around to slam the door in your face at every chance? If you have been contemplating these questions, What's the Point? aims to help you find answers. Paul Kolberg dives into the concepts of life and existence, pain and pleasure, love and ego, selflessness and selfishness, and lots more, and finally arrives at a conclusion: a recipe for a positive and fulfilled mindset in an imperfect world. What's the Point? Finding Hope in a Crisis makes use of logical arguments and prompts readers to think outside their present realities; it requires an open mind and a quiet space to reflect.

What's the Point? Finding Hope in a Crisis is straight to the point; the answers are not hidden in layers of mysterious philosophical concepts but presented with points that are easy to assimilate. These points have helped me to think further and look deeper into some life concepts, triggering insights that I was able to discover by myself. Paul Kolberg makes it clear from the beginning that religion is not included. Apparently, the things we have been told are not necessarily true. But there are some facts that are easy to see and can be proved with science. From these facts, we can arrive at conclusions and solutions that could make the world a better place. Paul Kolberg's book is a blessing in this pandemic period. What's the Point? projects ways to find hope and love in troubling times. We need more books like this, especially now."
